Nov 6: Better Than Life?

Psalm 63 was composed more than 3,000 years ago. But it presents us with an idea that's radical even today: "Your mercy is better than life itself."

Better than life? Such unquestioning trust in the mercy of God is a hard notion to accept in our secular age. But no one less than the future ruler of Israel, David, expressed this thought when he was hiding in the desert from jealous King Saul, who wanted him dead.

After many days without enough water or food, David's body weakened. But he offered his suffering as prayerful yearning for God.

As can be attested by the holy men and women of the early Church who fled to desert wilderness to seek God, they could see and feel God's presence and power in a unique way there.

Pope St. John Paul II pointed to this psalm to illustrate how essential and profound is our need for God's mercy.

"Without him we lack breath and even life itself," he told a general audience in 2001. "For this reason the Psalmist puts physical existence itself on the second level, if union with God should be lacking."

Our prayer today: Eternal Father, we thank you for speaking to us today as you did to David so long ago, reminding us that our earthly life has little meaning without you at its center.

POPE FRANCIS

MORNING MEDITATION IN THE CHAPEL OF THE DOMUS SANCTAE MARTHAE

In a shoreless sea- Thursday, 20 October 2016

(by www.osservatoreromano.va)

Prayer, adoration, and acknowledging that we are sinners: these are the three paths which open a Christian to the knowledge and understanding of the mystery of God. Pope Francis reflected on this theme during his homily for Mass at Santa Marta on Thursday, 20 October.

The Pontiff's reflection was inspired by the words of Saint Paul to the Philippians (3:8), taken from the day's Gospel acclamation: "I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them as refuse, in order that I may gain Christ". In the day's first reading (Eph 3:14-21), Paul asks that the Ephesians may likewise receive "the grace" to "gain Christ". It is about "a step in prayer", Francis explained. Indeed, Paul teaches the Ephesians "this path", and prays on his knees: "I bow my knees before the Father... that according to the riches of his glory he may grant you to be strengthened with might through his Spirit in the inner man".

What the Apostle is calling for is the "grace to be strong, strengthened, through the Holy Spirit". However, why would he wish "that the Ephesians be strengthened through the Holy Spirit"? Paul responds: it is so that "Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith". This "is the core", the Pope said. However, the Apostle "does not stop there, he continues: [it is so] 'that you, being rooted and grounded in love, may have power to comprehend with all the saints'". And this is the understanding which the letter to the Ephesians gives to this original explanation: "to comprehend with all the saints what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and to know the love of Christ which surpasses knowledge".

"Paul, in this prayer", Francis said, "goes forward and immerses himself into this sea, this bottomless, shoreless sea, an immense sea which is the person of Christ". Thus, "he prays that the Father may give to the Ephesians — he prays for us — this grace: to know Christ".

Yet, how does one "know Christ" in such a way that He is the "true gain", before whom "all other things are refuse"? Through the Gospel, the Pope said. Indeed, Christ "is present in the Gospel": therefore, by "reading the Gospel we know Christ". And "all of us do this, at least when we hear the Gospel when we go to Mass". Of course, we can also know Jesus "through the study of the catechism: the catechism teaches us who Christ is". All of this, however, "is not sufficient. In order to be able to understand 'the breadth and length and height and depth' of Jesus, we first must enter into a context of prayer, as Paul did, on bended knee: 'Father, send me the Spirit to know Jesus Christ'".

Thus, understanding goes beyond the superficial, and penetrates into the depths of the mystery. The Pope observed: "We know the Child Jesus, Jesus who heals the sick, Jesus who preaches, who performs miracles, who dies and resurrects. We know all of this, but this does not mean we know the mystery of Christ". Indeed, it deals with "something very profound, and for this reason prayer is necessary: 'Father, send me your Spirit in order that I might know Christ'. It is a grace. It is a grace which the Father gives".

In addition to prayer, Francis spoke of the need for adoration. Paul, in fact, "not only prayed, he adored this mystery which surpasses all understanding, and in a context of adoration asks for the grace that 'to him who by the power at work within us is able to do far more abundantly than all that we ask or think, to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus to all generations'". This is therefore "an act of adoration, of praise: to adore". This is because "one cannot know the Lord without this habit of adoring, of adoring in silence". The Pontiff observed that this practice is not always found in the Christian life. "I believe, if I am not mistaken", he said, "that this prayer of adoration is the [prayer] least known by us, it is the one we do the least", as if it were a "waste of time before the Lord, before the mystery of Jesus Christ". Instead, we should rediscover "the silence of Adoration: he is the Lord and I adore him".

In short, "in order to know Christ, it is necessary to have self-knowledge, which means having the inclination to blame yourself", recognizing that, before God, "I am a sinner. But, no, I am a sinner by definition, since you know all the things I have done, and what I am capable of doing". In this respect, Francis recalled the passage from Chapter 6 of Isaiah, in which the prophet, at the moment in which he sees "the Lord, and all the angels who adore the Lord", exclaimed: "Woe is me! For I am lost; for I am a man of unclean lips" (v. 5): in other words, the Pope said, he admits to being a sinner. Therefore, "one cannot adore without blaming oneself".

In the end, "in order to enter into this bottomless, shoreless sea, which is the mystery of Jesus Christ", these three attitudes are necessary, the Pope concluded. The first is "prayer: 'Father, send me the Spirit so that he may lead me to know Jesus'. Second, adoration of the mystery, to enter into the mystery, to adore. And the third, to blame yourself: 'I am a man of unclean lips". From here there is the hope that "the Lord may give us this grace which Paul asks for the Ephesians, and also for us; the grace to know and gain Christ".

November 8

Feast of Archangel Saint Michael and All Heavenly Powers

The Archangel Saint Michael is perhaps one of the best known of the angels. Like Saint Gabriel and Saint Raphael he is not only an angel but also an Archangel, which is a chief angel. He is honored in Christian tradition but also among the Jews and Moslems.

The name "Michael" means "who is like God". The Greek word "angelos" means messenger. Angels are incorporeal creatures who praise God, act as messengers between God and man, and serve as guardians of nations, peoples, and individuals. Angels are often ordered into nine categories and are mentioned 192 times in Sacred Scripture. Four of these times St. Michael's name is recorded:

- 1) Daniel 10:13 ~ But the prince (that is the guardian angel of Persia) of the kingdom of the Persians resisted me one and twenty days, and behold Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me...
- 2) Daniel 12:1 ~ But at that time (end of the world) shall Michael rise up, the great prince, who stands up for the children of your people.
- 3) Jude 1:9 ~ Yet when Michael the archangel was fiercely disputing with the devil about the body of Moses...
- 4) Apocalypse (Revelation) 12:7 - 9 ~ And there was a battle in heaven: Michael and his angels battled with the dragon, and although the dragon and his angels fought back, they were overpowered and lost their place in heaven. The huge dragon, the ancient serpent known as the devil or Satan, the seducer of the whole world, was driven out and hurled down to earth and his minions with him.

From these passages four offices are often assigned to St. Michael:

- ❖ to fight against Satan and evil
- ❖ to rescue the souls of the faithful from the power of the devil
- ❖ to be the champion of God's people

❖ to summon people's souls from this earth and bring them to judgment

It is the later, future-oriented, drama found in the account from the Apocalypse (Revelation), which combined with other extra-scriptural and legendary traditions, to give us the story of St. Michael, as we know it: After the creation of the heavens and earth, there was a battle in heaven. Lucifer, the "light-bearer", the "morning star", who was the chief among angels, rebelled against God. Because of Lucifer's envy, pride, and desire to sit upon God's throne, he did not want to be subject to God or to serve Him. He took a third of the angels into revolt with him. Michael however, was loyal to God, and declared he would serve God, for "who is like unto God" ("Michael"). With the other two-thirds of the angels he defeated Lucifer and cast him and his supporters out of heaven. Lucifer now became called Satan ("adversary") and those angels who supported him became devils. As a reward for his loyalty Michael was made the chief angel. Due to this leadership role the Church named the Archangel a Saint, and the Eastern Liturgy assigned him the title of the "Archistrategos" ("highest general").

Besides these roles of a military nature there is another role which was assigned to St. Michael, that of healer. This tradition started in Phrygia where many healing hot springs were dedicated to him. Soon Constantinople revered him as a celestial doctor. As time went on he was invoked in a variety of other roles. In Egypt he became the patron of the Nile and his feast is celebrated on the day that the river rises. Germany and France also have a special veneration for him that involves rugged natural landscape, such as mountains, the most famous of all being Mont. St. Michael in Brittany. He is the guardian of Portugal where his feast is celebrated on the third Sunday of June by special permission of the Pope. Among his other titles are: Prince, Angel of Chivalry, Angel of Judgment, and Angel of the Sun.

The cult of St. Michael is very old. The Jewish people revered him as the patron of Israel and he often appeared in the Hebraic Kabbal and other mystical writings and traditions.

In Christianity Pope Sylvester in Rome and Patriarch Alexander in Alexandria both introduced the feast in the fourth century. The Western Church celebrates the Feast of Saint Michael on September 29th, along with Saint Gabriel, Saint Raphael, and all the Archangels, while in the Eastern Church this same Feast is celebrated on November 8th.

The first emperor to convert to Christianity, Constantine the Great (324 - 337), built a church in honor of St. Michael on the Bosphorus at a spot called Anaplus, some fifty miles south of Constantinople. On the opposite headland on the Asiatic shore, the emperor Justinian built another church in St. Michael's honor. During the fourth and fifth centuries alone, within Constantinople and its vicinity, there were built some fifteen churches and chapels dedicated to this Archangel. Other cities and towns soon followed. Ravenna, for example, erected a large church to St. Michael and kept his feast on June 9th. During the reign of the emperor Arcadius, yet another famous church was built in Constantinople, by some healing springs, dedicated to St. Michael and all the "synaxis" (synod, assembly) of angels. This feast of the Synaxis of St. Michael and all the angels, was celebrated on November 8th, and hence, this date became the main one in which the Archangel was revered in the Eastern Church. This feast quickly spread over the entire Greek, Syrian, and Coptic Church.

In both Western paintings and Eastern iconography, St. Michael is represented in certain standard artistic ways. He has a halo, denoting his sanctity, and is winged as most angels are.

The concept of angels being winged was a late one in Judaism, coming after the Babylonian captivity. The winged lions and bulls of the Assyrians and the griffins of the Hittites influenced the Israelites. In Western pictures he usually carries either a sword (denoting his defeat over Satan and evil), and/or a scale (depicting his role in the last judgment). Often a horned, winged, Satan or dragon is being trampled underfoot and put to death. Frequently the gaping cavern of a burning hell is depicted as the intended destiny of the devil. Although some Eastern icons do have St. Michael holding a scale, or sword, and picture him triumphing over the evil one, mostly the Saint is portrayed as holding a staff and/or an orb, representing his messenger and seer roles and his sage, insightful governance. His face is fair and noble looking, and his entire pose is a peaceful and ethereal one.
